

Michael Diamond is the President of World Resources Chicago, a consulting firm which helps businesses and organizations respond to global challenges and opportunities. He is a Lecturer at Northwestern University and DePaul University teaching global health and civil society and addressing the reduction of disparities in health. Previously, he was the Executive Director of The Global Chicago Center of The Chicago Council on Global Affairs. For more than 25 years, Michael has worked with global health, refugee, rehabilitation and social and economic development programs around the world. He has managed the Humanitarian Programs of The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International and in that capacity he managed PolioPlus, Rotary's global program to eradicate polio. He has also worked with the international YMCA and has lived in Bangladesh and Switzerland. In this work he has visited over 45 countries and has worked with people in over 150 countries. He received his M.A. in Medical/Social Anthropology from the New School for Social Research in New York and is completing his PhD in Anthropology at Northwestern.